So don't make assumptions. Steer clear of prying though; you want them to come and tell you in their own time. If you try and pressure them, it'll probably make them close up – the opposite of what you want. What you can do is create an environment where your child feels able to tell you they're LGBT, knowing you'll be supportive.

A mathematical proof is an argument that deduces the statement that is meant to be proven from other statements that you know for sure are true. For example, if you are given two of the angles in a triangle, you can deduce the value of the third angle from the fact that the angles in all triangles drawn in a plane always add up to 180 degrees.
